SECTION A: COMPULSORY

Question 1

The status of health has a significant impact on the overall development of a country. Historically, health comprised of three main traditional indicators, mainly: medical advancement in the prevention and treatment of disease, access to health facilities and services, and longevity. Today, the term health has gained more and broader indicators with a focus on decent housing, decent employment, freedom from discrimination and climate change. Review the reasons and implications for this broader definition of health. [50]

SECTION B: CHOOSE ONE OF THE TWO QUESTIONS

Question 2

Indigenous knowledge is an integral part of culture and history of local communities with the possibility to enrich the development process in Africa. However, the advancement of western and modern value systems results in unfair competition and disregard for African traditional norms and values, which compromises the overall development of Africa. Assess the value of this statement. [50]

Question 3

People-centered development is about the active participation of affected communities in the development process, from the beginning of the process to the end. Participation is viewed differently by different people. Some view it as a means to empowerment, whilst others view it as an end to empowerment. The latter view implies that participation is empowerment. Which view do you agree with and why?
